

SENATE CHEERS ITALIAN PRINCE

Head of War Mission Makes an Eloquent Address

INTRODUCED
BY MARSHALL

"House of Hapsburg Must Go," Says the Vice-President

Washington, June 1.—Attired in the uniform of a captain of the Royal Italian navy, his royal Highness, Ferdinand of Savoy, prince of Udine and head of the Italian war mission, spoke yesterday before the United States Senate.

Speaking on behalf of his cousin, the king of Italy, and the people of that country, the prince expressed warm appreciation of the motives which inspired the United States to enter the war on the side of humanity and justice and predicted certain victory if the allies hold together in their common purpose to overthrow Prussian autocracy.

Introducing the speaker, Vice-President Marshall stirred the Senate chamber to a high pitch of enthusiasm when he declared:

"The house of Hapsburg must be destroyed. Tall, erect and spare of build, the king made a striking figure as he stood on the rostrum beside the vice-president. His full dress uniform of rich dark blue was set off by innumerable gold buttons and braid, and from his shoulders hung heavy gold epaulettes. Across his breast, from shoulder to waist, a brilliant sash of green satin served to hold in place the gold-mounted sword that hung from his left side. In his right hand he held a gold-braided hat similar to that worn on full dress occasions by staff officers of the American navy.

The prince read his speech in English. Owing to his pronounced accent it was at times difficult to follow his phraseology, but the spirit of the utterance was infectious, and time and again the floor and the galleries broke out in applause even though what was being said at the time was difficult to catch.

Some of the other members of the mission sat on the floor of the Senate during the speech and some, including most of the military and naval officers in uniform, sat in one of the galleries. For the purpose of escorting the prince into the Senate chamber, Vice-President Marshall appointed a special committee that included Senators Martin of Virginia, Saulsbury of Delaware, Stone of Missouri, Lodge of Massachusetts, Swanson of Virginia, Knox of Pennsylvania and New of Indiana. Senator Stone, however, did not appear on the floor at all during the address.

Count Macchi di Cellere, the Italian ambassador, and Mme. di Cellere sat in the diplomatic gallery facing the rostrum.

At the close of the prince's address he and other members of the visiting mission shook hands with members of the Senate. The prince's speech follows:

"I consider it a great honor for the mission of His Majesty the king of Italy to be welcomed by the American Senate. It is also a great honor for me and a source of deep satisfaction to greet you on behalf of my country and to speak in this glorious assembly, which has never forgotten the noble traditions of democracy and the principles of liberty, in the name of which it was constituted.

"In this hour of danger, in which military absolutism is threatening every one, there are nations that have forgotten old and new competitions, and have united to defeat this menace of the common safety.

"We are in a more fortunate position. Between the United States of America and Italy there has never been any cause of conflict; therefore in your history and in ours there is no page which should be forgotten in this hour of brotherhood. This friendship is enhanced by the fact that both our people are at war, not because of any imminent danger that threatened us, but to defend the same ideals of humanity and justice.

"Nearly three years have elapsed since Europe, without any justifying motive, perhaps without any motive at all beyond the will of a small military aligar-chy, was driven into the greatest conflict which human history records. "But a deeper anguish is stirring their souls. That which has grieved us more than the wealth destroyed, more than the lives cut off in the flower of their youth, is the sight of cultivated and intelligent nations, who but yesterday shared with us all a communion of life and intellect, and who have now denied those principles of humanity and of justice which were the results of long centuries of work and the great and difficult conquest of civilization."

MEN 31 JUNE 5 ESCAPE.
No Need for Them to Register—Hundreds Are Affected.

Washington, June 1.—All men in the United States who observe their 31st birthday on June 5 should not register for service in the national army. A decision to this effect was made yesterday by Provost Marshal General Enoch H. Crowder, who has charge of the registration of men for service in the national army. General Crowder held that men in this class would become 31 years old at midnight, June 4, and consequently would be more than 31 years old on June 5. This is considered the most important decision rendered by General Crowder on the universal service bill.

NEW YORK HAS ENOUGH ARMY EN- GINEER RECRUITS

Quota Is Made Up, So Enlistment Station Was Closed Yesterday.

New York, June 1.—More than enough men to make up New York state's quota to the engineers who will labor in maintaining communications behind the entente lines in France have been recruited and the enlistment station here closed yesterday. The corps requires 1,098 officers and men; 1,268 have been accepted, the extra ones being held in reserve.

VILLA MEETS DEFEAT BY GARCIA'S ARMY

United States Troops Patrol Border on the Watch for Rebel Forces.

Washington, June 1.—Gen. Villa was defeated south of Lamula by Gen. Garcia May 29, said dispatches received by the war department yesterday.

The official dispatch announcing Villa's defeat said: "Commanding officer at Marfa, Tex., reports that the Mexican commandant at Presidio says Villa was defeated south of Lamula by Garcia on the 29th. "The commanding officer at Presidio also reports that Rio Jas, with about 100 men, left Palvo for Ojinaga. Villistas reported opposite Palvo proved to be refugees."

The department was not advised, however, concerning the occupation of Ojinaga by Villistas and the dispersal of the small Carranzista forces there.

FIFTY-NINE PERISHED

Only One Man of Crew on Steamer Sagamore
Survived

STRUCK FLOATING
MINE OFF IRISH COAST

News of Sinking Has Just Reached U. S. Though It
Occurred on March 5

Boston, June 1.—First details of the sinking of the British freight steamer Sagamore of the Warren line, which sailed from Boston for Liverpool on Feb. 21, became known here yesterday, showing that only one man out of a crew of 60 survived.

Fifty-nine men perished. Two boatloads of 43 men were never heard from after the first night following the time the crew took to the boats.

Of the other 17 in the third boat, which was picked up after eight days, 16 succumbed to exposure, frostbite, gangrene or shock of amputations. The sole survivor was a British seaman.

The sinking of the Sagamore never was reported by the British admiralty. The only news obtained before was an indefinite report, learned through insurance circles, that the Sagamore was torpedoed and sunk on March 5, and that two Boston men, John Henry and Michael Halliwell, were lost.

Yesterday a British shipping man just arrived in Boston gave details of the fate of the Sagamore and her crew. The liner struck a floating mine off the Irish coast in a freezing gale.

The stricken vessel, which was heavily laden with foodstuffs and munitions, went to the bottom. The officers and crew barely had time to take to three boats.

Two of the boats have never been heard from so far as is known. It is now assumed that they were lost with their 43 men.

The third boat, containing 17 men, was picked up eight days later by a vessel from England bound to African ports.

In the eight days intervening, 10 of the 17 men had died of cold, hunger and injuries. The remaining seven were horribly frost-bitten. They were given what treatment the Africa-bound ship could offer, but gangrene set in. One of the seven died before the first African port was reached. The other six were taken ashore.

Gangrened hands and feet were amputated, but five of the six were too far gone. They died. Thus the list of survivors was reduced to a solitary seaman.

U. S. GUNBOAT STOPS LINER, MAKES ARREST

Takes Off the Son of Wealthy San Francisco Merchant Who Is Now in Germany.

Los Angeles, June 1.—A United States gunboat stopped the Pacific Mail steamship San Juan yesterday and took off F. W. Fay, 23 years old, said to be the son of a wealthy San Francisco merchant, who is now in Germany.

Fay was brought to Los Angeles and is held in the county jail "for federal investigation."

Fred Boden, special agent of the department of justice, and a local deputy sheriff made the arrest on telegraphic instructions from Washington received at midnight Wednesday. Fay was bound for Mazatlan, Mexico. He is said to have returned from Germany in the last year.

COSSACKS. WANT WAR

Must Help the Allies by Advancing, They Declare

URGE SUPPORT
OF NEW REGIME

The Russian Government Is Alarmed Over Loan
Failure

Petrograd, via London, June 1.—The Cossacks in the Ural district held a convention recently and passed a resolution to give their unqualified support to the temporary government. They also issued an appeal to all citizens of free Russia to follow their example. Among the declarations contained in the appeals were the following:

"You must remember that the enemy is watching our interior disorganization. Away with fraternization and disorders! We have only one front—our own and that of the allies. The army must not remain quiet, but must help the allies by advancing."

Information from the Tambov government indicates that the peasants are bringing wheat for the army in increasing quantities. Some of the village authorities are refusing to accept pay for this, and insist on donating it.

The provisional government is seriously considering a widespread scheme of confiscation of private property. This is the result of the relative failure of the war loan, due to the hoarding of currency.

The correspondent of the Associated Press understands that the government will issue a communication reporting capitalists for not subscribing to the loan and declaring that the aim of the war loan is to prevent the flooding of the country with fresh paper currency not backed by gold. The government, the communication will say, must, as things stand, issue more and more paper, with the result that a further depreciation in the paper already issued will occur.

The communication will add that the capitalists will feel that this kind of confiscation is much more burdensome than voluntary subscriptions to an interest-bearing war loan. The sole aim of the confiscation being to call in paper money, war stocks will be exempted. The government will further remind persons who hoard currency that the confiscation by no means exhausts the category of possible preventive and punitive measures.

An official announcement issued by Lieutenant Kozmin, assistant military governor of Petrograd, shows that on visiting Tearkoe-Sele recently and finding laxity by the guard charged with the care of former Emperor Nicholas, Lieutenant Kozmin addressed a warning to the soldiers, reminding them that they were responsible to the country for the careful watching of the prisoners.

The provisional government has abolished the practice of arresting bankrupt merchants. In future such merchants will be required to give a written promise not to leave their place of residence.

The food minister, M. Pischonbonoff, unfolded the serious economic situation to the congress of officers' delegates from the front, in explaining that it had been impossible as yet to establish a grain monopoly, owing to the complicated organization required.

On the eve of the revolution, he said, there was virtually no wheat available. The supplies had increased in March, but dwindled again in April.

The army requirement was 18,000,000 pounds of wheat weekly, but at one time only 5,000,000 arrived. The shipments now arriving were bigger, but far from normal, and the people would probably be obliged to face a still further shortage.

SLAYER SMALL MAY ESCAPE ROPE

On the Verge of a Breakdown in His Cell at Concord, N. H., Prison.

Concord, N. H., June 1.—Frederick L. Small of Mountainview, formerly a Boston broker, who has been condemned to die on Jan. 15, 1918, may cheat the gallows. He was found guilty of the murder of his wife, Florence Allen (Curry) Small, on Sept. 28, 1916. Mrs. Small's body was found in the ruins of a cottage at Ossipee lake which she and her husband had occupied for many months.

Testimony offered at the trial showed that Small first killed his wife, then by incendiary means fired the cottage in an attempt to conceal evidence of the crime. An appeal for a new trial is now before the superior court.

In his cell in the state prison the murderer paces back and forth nervously, or sits on his cot and broods hour after hour.

No longer does a grin of defiance or a sneer of contempt for the fate that awaits him curl the prisoner's lips. The man's face is drawn and marked by the lines of worry and the look of fear has appeared in his staring eyes.

Efforts of his jailers to keep him entertained and to distract his mind from the thought of the coming execution are useless. Small pays no attention to those who try to cheer him; he shows no interest in the activity of his counsel, who are trying to obtain a new trial for him; all through the day and even after he has lain down on his couch at night he dwells on his conviction and sentence.

Small's mental condition is having a marked effect on his health, and the keepers seriously fear that he will break down the strain. More exercise has been granted him and everything possible will be done to bring him to good health.
